

Launch of the new socomec.com website

Socomec has launched a new version of its socomec.com website. The site has undergone a major facelift, allowing 600,000 web visitors* to our 21 sites to discover our key markets, our applications and our products via a single and simplified access. The ergonomics and design have been revitalized, offering clearer, better laid out and more accessible information.

Setting the trend as the first of the series before all the other national sites, our new website should enable each visitor to quickly find information about the solutions that Socomec offers in its four fields of expertise: critical power, power control and safety, energy efficiency and PV applications.

These four areas of expertise have been redefined and refocused as part of the new organization in place since the beginning of 2013 which regroup the company's main functions under the same chain of responsibility: sales networks, production sites, technological research, the supply chain, etc.
